Masses of Irish people immigrate to places around the world due to lack of food in Ireland. They bring Irish dance with them.

Irish dance is more popular than ever. Besides in competitions, Irish dance can be seen at festivals, weddings, holiday shows, and parades.

Rules for competition, such as scoring, are established.

Dance masters travel across Ireland, teaching reels and jigs.

The Gaelic League is formed to promote the Irish identity. It creates its own ceilis and encourages dance competitions and lessons.

Shows such as Riverdance and Michael Flatley's Lord of the Dance, popularize Irish dance.
